

OceanPlanet Foundation

The yacht OceanPlanet was built by The OceanPlanet Foundation and launched in 2001. Bruce Schwab sailed OceanPlanet to become the first American to complete the Vendee Globe solo non-stop around the world race.

Based on the premise that there is much to learn from the world's oceans and the interconnectedness of the world, the OceanPlanet Foundation is dedicated to cultivating a spirit of adventure and possibility in the hearts and minds of young people. The OceanPlanet Foundation's mission is to provide inspirational and empowering classes and programs both on the water and via presentations. OceanPlanet's message comes alive through direct access to OceanPlanet and in collaboration with other foundations. We are a 501(c)3 not-for-profit organization.

OceanPlanet Foundation Programs

Training academy: aboard OceanPlanet for corporations, individuals, and youth groups developing teamwork and sailing skills.

Collaboration with other programs: in New England and nationally to provide high performance sailing opportunities for high risk youth, disabled individuals, and aspiring solo racers.

Presentations: Exciting, interactive, multi-media presentations by Bruce Schwab, the driving force behind OceanPlanet.

More About Bruce Schwab and the OceanPlanet Foundation

Bruce Schwab

On February 25, 2005, aboard his boat OceanPlanet, Bruce Schwab became the first American to officially finish the Vendee Globe Challenge race, sailing solo, nonstop, around the world. His other sailing accomplishments are also impressive:

- ◆ In 2002, he finished the Around Alone near the top of Class One;
- ◆ Won nearly every single-handed sailing race on the West Coast;
- ◆ Helped lead boats to victory in the 1998 and 2000 Pacific Cup races in Hawaii
- ◆ Won the double-handed Farallones race 8 times in his career; and,
- ◆ Awarded an Arthur B. Hansen medal by U.S. Sailing for participating in the rescue of a fellow sailor during the 1999 double-handed Farallones Race.

Today, Schwab is the Founder and Executive Director of the OceanPlanet Foundation, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization based in Portland, Maine that combines the excitement of world-class sailing races with a deep respect and appreciation for the role that the world's oceans and environment can play in the education of America's young people.

OceanPlanet Foundation

Based on the premise that there is much to learn from the world's oceans and the interconnectedness of the world, the OceanPlanet Foundation is dedicated to cultivating a spirit of adventure and possibility in the hearts and minds of young people. During both the 2002/2003 Around Alone and the 2004/2005 Vendee, thousands of school children from California to France and many places in between followed Schwab's progress in their classrooms via the Internet and learned valuable information on a number of topics relevant to their studies, such as icebergs, winds and waves, and hurricane formation.

In the meantime, Schwab continues to raise awareness for the OceanPlanet Foundation by entering some of the most exciting races on earth. Feel free to contact him by email at bruce@bruceschwab.com for more information or to make a contribution.
